

ALE
|al| noun

A type of beer brewed from malted barley using a warm fermentation with a strain of brewers' yeast. The yeast will ferment the beer quickly, giving it a sweet, full bodied and fruity taste. Most ales contain hops, which help preserve the beer and impart a bitter herbal flavor that balances the sweetness of the malt.

ANGRY ALE'S
|an-gre als| noun

An oasis at the top of Montford Dr. characterized with great food, cold beer, and a "never dull moment" atmosphere Ale's, as it is commonly referred to, prides itself on its Big A$$ Cans, Attractive Ladies, and a Huge Deck. Most often at Angry Ale's, one can find a smiling face, a cold beer and lively conversation.
